CANAPE Spring Newsletter - Into our Last Year

The first half of 2022 is already slipping past as CANAPE moves into its final period. Following on from the success of our conference last year, we are developing our final products ready for the end of the project in December 2022.

Over the remaining period of the project we will be completing our construction projects at Zuidlaardermeer and De Nol, and delivering a Pocket Guide to support future carbon farmers understand the potential of Paludiculture.

The winter has seen development at pace at our pilot farm at Horsey, in the Broads National Park. The pilot is now beginning to look like the farm of the future, and has provided very valuable learning experience for the future, especially in terms of managing incursions by marauding hordes of geese and deer.

For more information on the progress made and to see pictures of the latest progress, see our news story here.

CANAPE Chats Episode 4

Following a hiatus as we worked on our project conference, the CANAPE Chats videos have taken a fishy turn as we head over to the Netherlands, where Harry talks to Joop, Tsjippe and Jasper about VHL University of Applied Science's CANAPE work in De Leijen, a small lake in the northern Netherlands. Recording the Oral History of Barver Moor

Part of developing peatlands for the future means remembering the cultural history which has developed them into what they are today.

To that end the German Partnership has produced 3 videos capturing the history of Barver Moor from locals with memories of working at the site over the years. You can find our videos \(in German\) here.
